

THE STORY OF IRELAND

Footprints in the Future: Activity 2

You have arrived at 'The Present' in the story of Ireland and you have read about all the people who have made a contribution to the story. Each of these people has left their footprint in history along the way. The next stage of the story of Ireland is into the future and it will be your footprint that will take it there. What contribution would you like people to think that your footprint has made?

Think about your skills, what interests you have, what you would like to change, how would you change things and why. How might Ireland be different after you have made your contribution? Use the box below to draft your ideas. On a separate sheet of paper draw around your own foot to create its outline. Inside your footprint write your description of what you would like your contribution to Ireland's story to be and draw pictures around your footprint to illustrate this.
